

ISRAEL'S STRUGGLES WITH MODERN AMALEK.

Dr. Kohut Traces Russian Persecutions to Belief Without Religion.

WHERE THE WORD IS HELD FORTH

The text of Dr. Alexander Kohut's yesterday's sermon in Temple Abawath Chessed was taken from Exodus xvii, 8-10.

"Should some modern Raphael conceive the idea of putting on one large canvas the grand historical picture of Israel's struggles and vicissitudes from its cradle to our day, he could not find a better source of information than the inspiring verses of our text."

"Centuries have come and gone, and with their time always brought an Amalek to assail the freedom and happiness of Israel. Victory and defeat have been interchanged, always depending whether we have looked upward to the uplifted hands of our leader and become inspired by our lofty mission and the glorious responsibility with which we have been intrusted."

"The struggle with Amalek has oft been renewed from age to age, from generation unto generation. When God puts His hand on His throne, then the righteous and Godfearing should celebrate their triumphs, when truth, justice and human love ought to conquer, then we find the lurking hand, retarding the free development and full realization of the God idea and the establishment of His kingdom on earth."

"Judaism, however, despite all obstacles, holds its own. The hands of Moses are steady. This is the tradition of the text, but its Hebrew original conveys a far deeper impression, meaning 'his' hands or strength is Emanu,' which, in a later period of Jewish philosophical and ethical doctrine, was construed as an equivalent of belief. Mosaic knows not this conception, for in the 5,842 verses of the Pentateuch we seek in vain for the expression, 'Thou shalt believe,' while on the contrary we are invariably admonished to 'study,' 'investigate,' 'understand' and 'practice.'"

RELIGION VERSUS BELIEF.

This is the line of differentiation between Judaism and other denominations. Other faiths are based on belief, ours on religion based on proper understanding of divine knowledge and its personal application. Judaism is often accused of having no religion without belief. May we not say that others have a belief without religion? Religion is world embracing, belief world dividing. Religion is boundless, broad and deep. Belief is narrow and shallow. Our religion does not formulate its doctrines in writing, but its grand foundation comes next with 180,500 Catholics, 220 priests, and 276 secular. It has 161 churches, 13 stations and 31 chapels. The total orphan asylums contain 1,600 children. There is a total parochial with 1,200 students, two colleges, 6 academies and 20 parochial schools attended by 23,100 children.
